She Speaks to Angels starts out slowly, but suddenly picks up in a flurry of action. This book is very well-written, and the high school parts of the book are simply perfect. The author captures those moments exactly like the days when we were in high school (though we did not have angels or demons).

Angels. For example, in the Hagar stories the angel speaks to Hagar, but she acknowledges that it is God who speaks (Gen 16:7-13). In the revelation of God to Moses at Mount Horeb, the angel of the Lord and God himself are evident in the revelatory process. So too, the angel and God appear to Gideon (Judg 6:11).

Being forced to survive on her own had accelerated certain abilities faster than normal, like angel fire and glammers. She still couldn't fool other angels or vampires yet, but she could hide her wings for long periods of time among the humans. And that was more than most angels could pull off at her age.
