**Inspiration** can be a fickle thing. Most designers, when lacking ideas, turn to design galleries to find ideas. But there are a few problems with that approach. The most obvious is that when taking inspiration from similar mediums, there's a fine line between "inspired by" and "copied". [Links checked March/06/2017]

I'm still astounded by the actions of China last weekend. It seems we can count on them to make the stupid move, nearly every time. I'm astounded by how amateur and clumsy that tactic was, the "11:59, sorry man this is all I have in my pocket," move in turning around after 15 months and saying they can;t live up to anything that has been tentatively agreed to as it violates their sovereignty.

The river was dirtier than I expected, but visibility along the edge was likely acceptable. I advanced upstream and probed the deep pockets and runs next to the bank with the nymphing system, and after thirty minutes I finally connected with a twelve inch brown trout that grabbed the ultra zug bug on a lift at the tail of the drift.

Also, I want to share with you some beautiful Holiday artwork that my dear friends Dinosaurprince, Leon de Leon and Caravaggia created this season featuring my centaur, STRIDER! Just look at this breathtaking illustration. Leon's take on Strider is exquisite, and Caravaggia's beautiful painted backdrop has such a "classical Christmas" feel to it.

Dynamic websites are generated on the fly and use server-side technology to generate webpages. They typically extract their content from one or more back-end databases: some are database queries across a relational database to query a catalogue or to summarise numeric information, others may use a document database such as MongoDB or NoSQL to store larger units of content, such as blog posts ...
