Seeing Red Kathryn Erskine

Seeing Red by Kathryn Erskine – Historical Fiction, 6th grade and up (I know in some reviews it has 5th grade for the level but the topics are more of a middle school level in my opinion.) Released in October – I felt quite honored to read this book by the powerful Kathryn Erskine who creates touching, thoughtful books.

Seeing Red. In a nutshell: A boy faces up to prejudice in his small town, ultimately realizing that he can't erase the past but he can change the future. After his beloved father dies, Red tries everything to stop his mother from selling their home and business, even getting in trouble with the sheriff -- and worse.

Kathryn Erskine's Seeing Red is a thrilling novel that seamlessly blends fact with fiction. The book is set in Stony Gap, Virginia in 1972. Seeing Red was published on September 24, 2013 by Scholastic Press. The beginning of the book didn't hold my interest because it was slow to develop, however, there was more action as the book progressed.
