The Secret Songs by Fritz Leiber was first published in The Magazine of Fantasy and Science Fiction in August 1962. It was later the title story of a collection published in 1968 by Hart-Davis. I don't think anyone who has read Philip K. Dick widely could fail to see the tremendous stylistic and thematic similarities between this story and Dick's own work.

Selected Intelligence — Fritz Leiber and Philip K. Dick

This 15-page short story originally appeared in the October 1941 issue of Unknown Worlds. The author, Fritz Leiber, had just a few years before entered his first phase of greatness as a writer, especially as a fantasiste, but this piece is an example of his early mastery of the weird fiction form.
