Take an otherwise uninteresting object, and have the other characters (or at least one character) interact with it as if it is a real character, and you have a Companion Cube. Sometimes, the object blurs the line between real and imaginary by apparently doing things which would be hard for an inanimate object to do or telling people things they shouldn't have been able to already know, but the ...

For me it was the part you pointed out earlier with his daughter crying during the funeral. When Bradley talks about how annoying he found it later on, man that felt bad for me as a viewer, and it was pretty brilliant because it drove in on a emotional and psychological level how inhuman the homcunculi can be.
